

News Update (September 2009)

Coating Systems continues to work in all areas of tablet coating.

During this time of financial uncertainty for companies, more efforts are now being focused on greater value for money than ever before.

CSI have seen an increase in demand for refurbishment of equipment, specifically within the areas of air handling equipment and state-of-the-art spray systems.

One recent project was to refurbish a coater, circa 1970, which when finished was a smart addition to the customer's production facility, but at a fraction of the cost to that customer of a new machine.

New air handling equipment gives the added performance you would expect in 2009, with the option for energy efficiency utilising heat recovery, to help to reduce the cost of ownership.

In these challenging times, value for money is very important, but only if quality is maintained. CSI have always offered a quality product at an affordable price and will continue to do so.

At CSI, we are not sitting back; development of new products is always taking place, so keep watching this space for news.
